WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

Northern California

- Dry weather will continue for Northern California with mild to warm temperatures in the afternoon. During the night, areas west of the Cascades will see temperatures drop close or just below freezing and areas east of the Cascades will see milder temperatures.
- Breezy east to northeast winds can be expected across higher elevations this weekend.
- For NE California, a brush-by cold front early Sunday will bring gusty northeast winds and a recharge of cold air. Widespread hard freezes are looking likely for Monday and Tuesday mornings.

Southern California

- Thunderstorms in Southern California are producing heavy rainfall which has prompted several Flash Flood Watches and Warnings and Flood Advisories.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

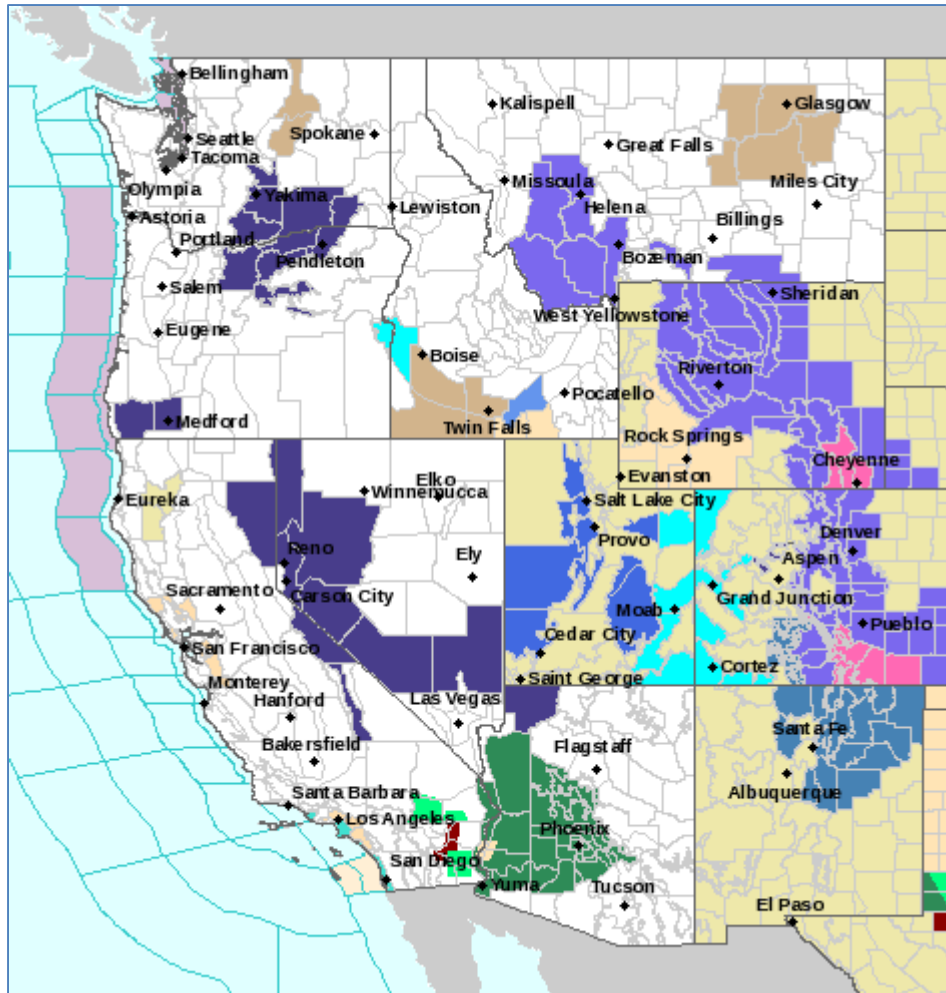

- High risk due to gusty NE/Offshore winds and low relative humidity (RH) Sunday Diablo-Santa Cruz Mtns
- Persistent blocking ridge pattern will remain well into next week with a few inside slider like disturbances.
- Gusty N-NE/Offshore winds through Sunday night. Strongest night/morning gusts 30-40 mph across the lower Wrn Cascade-Sierra slopes and nearby foothills, and 25-35 mph Sacramento Valley to Lake, Napa, and Sonoma Counties in Mid Coast. Gusts 25-35 mph Diablo-Santa Cruz Mtns Sunday. Strongest wind gusts tonight through Sunday night. Afternoon speeds lighter compared to overnight speeds.
- Less wind next week although periods of light offshore wind during the overnights will continue.
- Lowering RH with unusually low day and nighttime readings well into next week.
- Rising temperatures with above normal readings between 5-15 degrees well into next week most areas.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

An area of low pressure currently off Point Conception will move inland over Southern California Saturday. Another area of low pressure will drop into the Great Basin from Canada Sunday and then drop into the Desert Southwest Monday through Wednesday. This low will open and move off to the east late next week. Meanwhile, high pressure will approach the California Coast from the Pacific Ocean Sunday through Tuesday. The area of high pressure will weaken a little Wednesday through the end of next week.

- Scattered showers and thunderstorms will move across Southern California tonight through Saturday afternoon.
- Most locations across Southern California will receive less than a half inch of rainfall.
- Maximum temperatures will be near to a little below normal through Sunday, with mid 50s to mid 60s across the mountains and 70s to low 80s in the valleys.
- Northeast winds of 20 to 40 mph with gusts to 60 mph will surface across the mountains and below the canyons and passes of Southern California Sunday night through Tuesday morning.
- Winds will decrease Tuesday afternoon and then there will be locally gusty offshore winds across Southern California Tuesday night through the end of next week.
- Minimum humidity will drop into the single digits and teens Monday and Tuesday and then increase to 10% to 25% Wednesday through the end of next week.
- Maximum temperatures will be around 5 degrees above normal Monday through the end of next week, with 60s to low 70s across the mountains and upper 70s and 80s in the valleys.
